“ Bill and my grandma (Peggy) met while at embassy and became best friends immediately when I introduced them. You would have thought they knew each other in another lifetime from how well they clicked. I would visit her daily and she couldn't wait for me to push her down to his room each time and we would have nightly hallway get togethers as we called them. And I would bring them both a sweet treat to share together, which was usually raspberry pie. He made her time there full of joy and something to look forward to. They would plan their meals together and visit one another in their down time daily. My grandma was my best friend and after she passed, I continued to visit with Bill. He took me under his wing with loving arms and made the hard days of missing her a little more bearable. Visiting with him and enjoying sweet treats, while talking about times with my grandma and reminiscing on past times in his life became one of my favorite things to do. It had been a few weeks since I went over and today I showed up to find he joined my grandma in heaven along with all the family told me about. Bill, I just know that Charlie was the first one to greet you as soon as you got up there. Gosh, I'm going to miss our visits so much. Please give my grandma a big hug for me. To his family I'm praying for comfort and peace. He was such a good man.
