“ I haven't seen Debby since graduation. But I remember her clearly. We were odd friends. She was so smart and brilliant and I was dumb and funny. But we bonded somehow. My clearest memory is in our junior year. She agreed to take us home after a basketball game. Chris Betts and I had our clarinets and Donna Boncaldo came along. Debby had a beautiful new volkswagon. It had just began snowing. Debby was as straight as they come, and always did the right thing. But that night Chris talked us into going out 8th street road, past the cemetery. We knew we were wrong but wanted to have a little adventure. Needless to say we went through the guardrail of a bridge and broke the ice into the creek. Her new volkswagon was totaled. Boy, did we ever get in trouble. First time each of us got a fast ride in the ambulance and all if us had frostbite , bruises and glass in us. At first our parents were nice at the hospital. But after they saw we were alright..... I can't imagine how upset Debby's parents must have been. I still live with the guilt of getting her in trouble. But now I can picture her flying that yellow volkswagon in heaven laughing and enjoying every second of it!
