Aunt Helen was an excellent role model for me as a young child in the early 60's. I remember coming home from school and complaining about my second grade teacher for correcting me about my spelling assignment. Aunt Helen sat down with me and after my conversation with her about my teacher I went to school and thanked my teacher for correcting my spelling. I learned an important lesson that day about getting another person's perspective before jumping to conclusions.

Most of the time, all I needed to do was look at her and knew that everything will be fine someday if you hold a positive attitude. Thank you Aunt Helen for your strength, your humility and most of all for your love of me and your family, local community and country.

Simply put, she was the best teacher (including college professors) that I ever had. She made me feel good about myself. She knew that students with self confidence could achieve more and therefore would instill that in them.
