“ Jeannie was a darling and straightforward woman and I loved that about her. She asked me questions that people we're afraid to ask me but without one hint of judgement. That alone was no small feat and something that I never took for granted. In the eighth grade when filling out a "What I Want To Do When I Grow Up" sheet I penned in Jeannie's name as my role model. Her ability to be both gracious and sincere were a blessing to be around.

While Jeannie's earthly sojourn has reached its conclusion, the legacy of her life will continue on for many generations. It was our privilege and blessing to have known and worked with her in Cape Town, and to have experienced her friendship and love. While the world was enriched by her presence, heaven has been reserved for her eternity.
