“ *Everyone who knew Joe loved him as did all our family. A man of few words, you could always tell when Joe was enjoying himself, and much of that enjoyment came from being around children that he and Linda babysat. A short story: Joe, Linda, and Bonnie Matthews stopped at our house several years back when Bonnie was a young teenager of about 14. Bonnie had vacationed with them to the North Carolina coast. I took Joe and Bonnie for a car ride that evening while Linda and Diana stayed home fixing dinner. A short distance from our house I stopped the car to show Joe and Bonnie the home of Chris Daugherty the famous American Idol star whose rock band went on to stardom after the Idol show. The teenage Bonnie got so excited and jumped out of the car, ran across another guy's front yard and climbed up Daugherty's wooden fence to take a picture of his house on the other side. I looked at Joe and he was laughing like crazy at the sight as I went over to retrieve Bonnie off the fence before someone chased us out of there or started shooting. You will be greatly missed Joe. “ Joe was the sweetest man! I loved his laugh. He was so good to aunt Bernadine and she loved to talk to him on the phone. He didn't have a lot to say at family gatherings but it was always profound and came from the heart. He was a great listener and he will be missed.
